While Peter is a combination of ind, which the institution which employs him might somehow get along without his services, it never has.

While Peter is a combination of ind, which we he wisher has.

While Peter may not have been in existence

Peter is cheerful, intelligent and faithful. Peter does his work, his whole work, but does not stop there, for, in addition, he usually finds time to do a little of the work that others sometimes forget to do.

Cheerful workers are a blessing to society in general, and when they combine with it intelligence, loyalty and industry they deserve the monument which usually is raised to some one clse.

When it comes to a safe carrier of money, the Wells-Fargo Express Company has nothing on Peter, for during his thirty-seven years' service he has carried enough of the bank's real cash to finance the Steel Trust, always delivered the goods on schedule time, and to the last cent. In fact, for correctness and precision he is a Human Cash Register.

Song Recttal—MME.

He will lock the vaults for the last time, and the place thereof shall know him no more.

The officers and employes will call for his cheerful assistance, and only the echoes of their voices will answer.

But Peter's immortality is assured.

His duties cheerfully performed, his unfailing courtesy, his countless little efforts to help and his faithfulness will live on.

Some men die and are forgotten, others leave us only to be remembered, but as an inspiration and a Guide, whether now or in the years to come, when his usefulness here is over, Peter is in himself a Sermon, writ in large letters.

The rain falls with much discrimination in this piece, and the instruments are used lightly and with sure effect in producing their agreeable pecture. Now and then, as if to suggest the mood of people who are rained upon, a sorrowful melody enters in the strings and makes every one a little depressed until the composer enters, as composers will, and bows his acknowledgment of the gracious applause.

valid in the coming trial he will receive about $125,000.

The contestants of the will are Mrs. Georgie B. Wentz, of 335 West End Avenue, and Albert B. Nichols, of Hempstead, L. I. When the will was brought before Surrogate Fowler for probate their lawyer, James H. Hickey, quit the case, and the counsel which they retained. Toney A. Hardy, did not have sufficient time to prepare his case, On these grounds the Appellate Division orders that the contest be retried.

Later Mrs. Wolfe's aunt, Mrs. Susan W. Nichols, died and left her niece a half share in her $300,000 estate. Of this share Illingworth will receive almost the entire amount unless the will is broken

The contestants allege that Illingworth never worked regularly, never properly provided for Mrs. Wolfe and also treated her cruelly. It is charged further that he induced Mrs. Wolfe to make her will while she was in a weakened condition from liquor and eigarettes. The campaign for raising the money will open actively to-day and will continue until the evening of January 14. The money is to be spent for hostess houses in cantonments, emergency housing for employed girls in manufacturing centres, work in negro communities and relief work in the war zone.
